In Her Shoes: Empowering Future Leaders in Transportation

9:00 AM - 1:00 PM, Wednesday, March 4, 2015

United States Department of Transportation - West Atrium & Conference Center
 1200 New Jersey Avenue SE, Washington, DC 20590

The United States Department of Transportation's (USDOT), Office of Small and Disadvantaged Business Utilization (OSDBU), invites you to "In Her Shoes: Empowering Future Leaders in Transportation". Taking place at USDOT headquarters in Washington DC, this event is in commemoration of Women's History Month and part of President Obama's "Ladders of Opportunity" initiative.

Young women, who are in college or juniors and seniors in high school, please join us for this special event. Please attend in business casual or professional clothing.

Professionals that are interested in participating as a mentor please register using the link below. Space is limited and an email confirmation from Randall Nossaman at OSDBU is required.

You will hear from public and private sector leadership and have an opportunity to interact one on one with participating professionals. This event includes two panels:

Panel 1 – Professional Etiquette: Social media, professional presentation, cell phone use, resumes and interview tips.

Panel 2 – Finding Your Career Path: Professional relationships, networking, internships, careers and constructive feedback.

To register for this event, please visit the following links:
